

CELEBRATE U.S. & YOU!

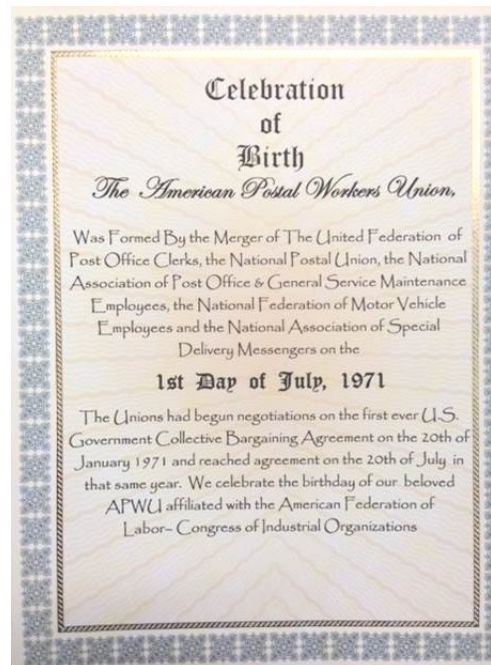

“Through all past history, whatever political party was in control of the government no matter whether the administrationwas conservative or progressive, the Post Office has been used in new ways for the promotion of the general welfare.....when new conditions arose, where additional benefit could be extended through this nation-wide enterprise, there was no hesitation in following the path of national progress.” Clyde Kelly, US Congress [R] 1932

July 1 is National Postal Worker Day

Postal workers have contributed so much to American society , literally helping bound our nation together. Because of the service we render to these United States we have helped provide our country with post roads that turned into highways, airmail that developed commercial air transportation, sidewalks, street names, trusted banking, growth of the railways, maps, zone improvement program that also helps the census. Even the abbreviations that identify every state in the union derive from the service postal workers have provided and continue to provide.

The list of our postal contributions could go on and on. So on this day we take special time out to Celebrate You and to THANK YOU for your service to America. Your Union also takes this time to celebrate the anniversary of the formation of the American Postal Workers’ Union and the establishment of the United States Postal Service which succeeded the U.S. Post Office Department.

Today, you continue to provide quality service which your Union is attempting to preserve and also to enhance as we fight for a contract.

Today, postal workers nation-wide toil on the screen lines, work floors, offices, docks and roads ensuring that America gets 1st class service. And so your Union once again says:

Thank You Postal Workers!
